The Wanderings of the Confederate Treasure Train in Wilkes County Described by One Who Knows All About It.—Railroad Collision News From All Parts of the State.

By Mail and Wire to the Constitution.

WASHINGTON, Ga., December 24.—[Special.]

As there seems to be a good deal of interest taken in the disposition of the confederate treasure-train the past week among the newspapers, and this place being the point at which the money was scattered, I have concluded to give some history of the matter as it has been told me by persons who guarded it while it was in this place. In April, 1865, there came to this place between eight and twelve wagon loads of money. About four hundred thousand dollars of this belonged to a bank in Richmond, and was gold, principally $20 pieces, and was not bullion, as some have stated. It was put in the old Washington bank building, which is now occupied by General Heard as a dwelling, at which place Mr. Davis stopped while in this place. This gold was followed up by the bank officers from Richmond after it had been here some time. These officers put it into wagons and started back to Richmond. Near Danburg, a village twelve miles north of here, the train was robbed by a band of straggling cavalrymen. It is said that some of these cavalrymen pulled off their drawers, tied them at the bottom, filled them with gold and slung them across their saddles. When the news reached here of the robbery, a party of men, now citizens of this place, went in pursuit and regained $125,000 of the stolen money. It was brought back to this place and put in the same old bank, and was finally turned over to a federal officer, Wilde, and he shipped the money to Washington city, I think. In a house near by where the robbery took place was a box of rich jewels given to Mr. Davis by citizens of Richmond to use as a last resort in maintaining the confederacy. It was hid in the garret of the house, and was pointed out to a federal officer by a negro. It is said this officer took charge of these jewels, and this is the last that has ever been heard of them. One of the men who went in pursuit of the robbers found $12,000 in gold lying in a mud hole in a field near the place the wagons were robbed.

As to the confederate part of the money, when it came to this place, two wagon loads of it (sixteen boxes) were placed in the top of a store on the west side of the public square in this town and a guard stationed over it by Major Moses, who paid the men $10 a day for guarding it. The boxes weighed about 100 pounds each, and contained silver coin, dollars, halves and quarters, and part contained silver bullion, and the whole amount is estimated to be $25,000 or $30,000. This was shipped to Augusta by Major Moses and his men, and it was put in a house on Broad street in that city. A lot of silver bullion was put in a vault under a store on the south side of the public square. It was understood that a party of soldiers had found out where it was and were going to raid it, so it was taken out and distributed among members of the Irvin artillery. These men were put upon their honor to take charge of it. They kept it for a week or so when they took it to Augusta one Sunday evening, and said it took $1 in the Georgia railroad bank, but Judge King refused to let it stay there, and I was brought back to this place by these men. Then it was shipped to Augusta again, and some parties went down to Augusta to inquire what had become of it, but could get no satisfactory answer; one of the party being told that the last seen of it, it was being kicked around some gentleman's yard.

Four wagon loads of this money were seen camping in a pine thicket, guarded by less than a half dozen men, about one mile from town, and three wagon loads, when last heard of, were being camped a mile and a half south of town at a mineral spring guarded by three or four confederate soldiers. A carpenter's chest filled, was seen going from one private residence, occupied by confederate officers, to another part of the town, a negro man being paid four dollars to transport it in a wagon, who said it took twelve men to put the chest in the wagon. What ever became of the chest and the seven wagon loads that were camping out near the town remains a mystery that remains to be accounted for. Two men were seen to take two carpet sacks of gold out of the tan yard branch near the town one night, but who they were or where they went is unknown.

Maxwell's statement about the wagons being robbed coming through the mill near of Washington is a mistake, as it took place ten or fifteen miles from town, near the Lincoln line, and the money was gold coin and not silver bars, as he states, and belonged to the Virginia bank and not to the confederacy. Mr. Maxwell's memory is certainly at fault. The account of a colored barber being whipped nearly to death to be made told where some of this gold was hid, is a mistake. The barber was hung up by the thumbs, but he was not whipped. A party of men that went from here to hunt up the robbed Virginia gold were paid ten per cent on all they collected. They collected about $125,000. General E. P. Alexander organized a party to hunt up this stolen gold, but when they arrived at the place of robbery, the first party of ten or fifteen that had gone out after it, had collected all that could be found, and Alexander's party collected none of it. Everything was in place the next morning. No damage was done by the collision except to the cars. Some of the creditors of Tison & Carter filed a bill enjoining the assignee, G. W. Warwick, from proceeding further with the business of the firm and to place the matter back in the hands of Mr. Carter, surviving partner, which was argued in America last week before Judge Crisp, but he has not yet rendered his decision.

DUBLINO, December 27.—[Special.]—The up and down freight on the Southwestern railroad collided near Montezuma yesterday, and the northern mail was delayed on account of it. The Constitution, so necessary to us as a disseminator of intelligence, did not reach us until this morning. No damage was done by the collision except to the cars. Some of the creditors of Tison & Carter filed a bill enjoining the assignee, G. W. Warwick, from proceeding further with the business of the firm and to place the matter back in the hands of Mr. Carter, surviving partner, which was argued in America last week before Judge Crisp, but he has not yet rendered his decision.

DUBLINO, December 27.—[Special.]—John Marlow and Miss Elvira Steigell were married on Sunday evening by Rev. C. W. Steigell.

This morning was married at the residence of the bride's father, in this town, Rev. W. R. Bramham of the North Georgia conference and presiding elder of the Dublin district, and Miss Addie Singleton, the ceremony being performed by Professor Singleton. The happy party after left for Oxford, Georgia.—On last night died Mrs. E. J. wife of M. L. Jones (nee Ferguson), in her forty-ninth year, full of Christian faith and hope. She was a member of the Methodist church; was a woman of standing, worth and influence, and greatly beloved by all who knew her.—Mr. Congdon, vice president of the celebrated Calhoun gold mining company, is here from New York.

DYON, December 27.—[Special.]—At the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Elder Jack-

THE SOCIAL WORLD.

THE FASHIONABLE GOSSIP OF THE WEEK.

Wedding—Balls and Banquets—The Here and There of the Society People—The Movements of the Belles and Beau—Among the Actors and Actresses of the Country.

The past week has shown none of the proverbial lull in society that comes before the holidays. On the contrary it has been an unusually gay one, and our fashionable young folks will go into the "week of festivities" that opens to-day pretty well fatigued.

Our social columns for this week show the first flush of the Christmas doings that will make glad the hearts of young and old. We merely give the hints to-day, and will furnish the details next week. In the mean time we invite our readers to the feast of good things, collected below from the note-books of our reporters.

The Social World.

A NOTABLE PARTY.

The most notable party of the week and one of the most charming of the season was that given by Miss Carrie Westmoreland on Thursday night. A more brilliant scene than that presented by her handsome parlor when the dancing was at its height was never seen. It was the universal remark that no one had ever seen so many lovely girls gathered under one roof in this city, and the visitors were charmed with the array of beauty presented by Atlanta. The dancing began at 9 and was kept up until 3 a. m. At midnight the guests were invited to a superb lunch, which was heartily enjoyed. Miss Westmoreland was assisted in doing the honors of the evening by her father, Dr. W. F. Westmoreland, and Mr. and Mrs. William Dickson and Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Peters. With such elegant hosts it is needless to say that everyone was made to feel at home.

Among those present from other cities were: Mr. and Mrs. Sterling B. Toney, Miss Toney, Miss Burge and Miss Moore, of Louisville; Misses Holt and Dunlap, of Macon; Miss Baker, of Augusta; Miss Conkling, of Baltimore; Miss Julia Jackson, of Charlotte; Miss Green, of North Carolina; Miss Caskey, of Richmond.

Among the married people present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Lowry, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fitten, Mr. and Mrs. W. Grady, Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Harris, Mr. and Mrs. Lena Morton, Mr. and Mrs. John A. Whitner, Mrs. Ed Schaefer, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Fears, Mrs. Deveny, Mr. Louis Gholston.

The costumes of the ladies were more than usually elegant, and it is noticeable that the Atlanta ladies never dressed with such elegance and taste as during the present season. A most captivating dress was a silk, worn by the grandmother of the young lady, who appeared in it on Thursday night, sixty years ago. It was of richest pattern, and was admired on all sides.

AN ELEGANT AFFAIR.

On last Tuesday evening the arcades of the Kimball house were more than usually brilliant, and on approaching the ball room door a scene of beauty was displayed within which would warm the coldest heart into a glow of gladness. The music floated out in soft and tender strains, the gallants were courtly and the ladies outshone the glitter of the chandeliers. The occasion was a hop in honor of Miss Julia T. Jackson, the daughter of Stone Mountain, who was to be married to Mr. John R. Holcomb, of this city, on the 21st inst. Miss Almada M. Morris, Rev. H. C. Hornady, officiating.

THE $10,000 BEAUTY.

THE LOVELIEST WOMAN IN THE WORLD--HER ADVENTURES.

Congressmen and Army Officers Falling Madly in Love with Her--She Denies that She Rescaped in Chicago and caused a Panic--She Took the Position for the Excitement.

From the Philadelphia Press.

"I think it's just too awfully mean for anything," pouted Miss Louise Montague, Forepaugh's $10,000 beauty, yesterday. "Here I've been home since the 12th of November and you're the first newspaper man who has been to see me. It's real mean."

The alleged victim of perfect female loveliness was found seated on a piano stool yesterday afternoon, in her boarding house on South Ninth street, by a Press reporter, to whom she gave such a cordial welcome, that the young man's heart was nearly dislocated in its frantic efforts to beat a double tattoo against the walls of his chest. Nor did the words that followed tend to restore his equanimity.

"I love reporters," chirruped the enchanting creature. "I adore them. They are so handsome, so intelligent, so obliging, so-- Why, I think they are just lovely."

The young man never recovered his breath while the interview lasted sufficiently to ask any but the most commonplace questions. He looked and listened and wondered.

The fair Louise has a charming trick of rolling her eyeballs in a manner strongly suggestive of a colicky gazelle, and of displaying pearly set of teeth most bewitchingly. Then she bites her nether lip to make it redder than it ought to be, and puts her head on one side, like a sparrow meditating over a grain of wheat. Louise freezes her front hair, and it falls over her forehead in well-simulating confusion. She laughs just as heartily as though she was not a $10,000 beauty, and the loveliest attraction of the mammoth aggregation of quintuplex wonders.

THE BEAUTY'S VICTIMS.

"Yes," said the beauty, with a sort of satisfied dejection, "I think reporters are simply beautiful. Of course congressmen, navy and army officers fall madly in love with me, but please! I never attempted to keep the run of them. It's too utterly foolish, you know. Why, bless your dear innocent soul, I'm actually harassed to death by thousands of love letters, and hundreds of attempts to seek an interview with me. Once in Indianapolis I received a magnificent bouquet with a tiny note concealed amid the flowers. What do you think it was like? I'll tell if you promise not to tell." And again did the divine creature cause her eyes to turn a double somersault. The visitor placed his hand on his false and hollow heart and promised.

"Well," continued Miss Montague, in a hissing whisper, "the writer was a prominent but bald-headed pork-packer. He wrote about this way:

"Light of my life! Would that I could call you that in reality, for my brain whirls, my limbs almost refuse their duty, my very heart seems to swell and burst when I think of you. Oh, my enslaver! Pity me! Think of the tortures I endure whenever my eyes rest on your bewitching beauty. If you only knew how I have gone to the circus night after night to worship at your shrine, your heart would melt. I succeeded in obtaining one of your hair-pins from one of the circus men for $1.50, and I sleep with it under my pillow. Only last night it stuck in my ear and I am mad with joy."

"I paid no attention to the letter at all," continued the beauty, "it was so awfully, utterly absurd."

"Is there any truth in the story, Miss Montague," asked the reporter, "about your husband, Paul Allen, having put you up as a stake against $10 in a game of poker with Bobby Newcomb, the minstrel?"

"How ridiculous," laughed the beauty. "Why, of course there is no truth in it. The two men don't know each other. I married Mr. Allen in San Francisco in 1877, was separated from him in 1878, because he loved the gaming table better than he did me, and then I went to New York, where I played 'Josephine' in Pinafore. Mr. Newcomb played 'Ralph Raketrax' in the same company. It was then that the falsehood was manufactured by some malicious story-tellers. Just as if such a thing could be. And putting me up against $10 too! How very funny. According to that I had no say in the matter at all. No, sir, the whole thing is pure fiction."

THE BEAUTY BREAKS LOOSE.

"You remember the story in the western papers," continued the reporter, "headed 'A terrible catastrophe' people fleeing for their lives! Lalla Rookh, the $10,000 beauty of Forepaugh's circus escapes and produces the most intense consternation! The beautiful creature at large in the streets! Did you escape?"

"Now, that's no, too bad," replied the beauty, in a deprecating tone. "Of course I didn't. What awfully awful stories the papers do tell to be sure. It's awful." "Then what about the third street broker of this city," persisted the newspaperman, "who is so despatchly in love with you?"

The fair enchantress smiled roguishly. "I'm sure," said she, "that I can't help it if people fall in love with me. Let me see, I know one, two, yes three brokers on Third street. One of them is very rich. Maybe it's him. Dear me, how I am beset. Really, to answer the question of truthfully, I don't know of any particular broker. I am not engaged to any that I remember."

"Did you ever see the Minersville beauty who was your rival at the time the engagement was made?"

"Oh, yes," was the reply. "She was rather pretty, but then her feet were big, and she was awkward. Now, you know I possess the exact symmetry of form and feature. Once the length of the chin, the length of the nose, twice the circumference of the wrist, the size of the neck, and all that sort of thing, you girl know. The Minersville was not a professional artist like myself, and would not suit Mr. Forepaugh at all. You know I expect to have a theatrical company of my own, after I conclude my engagement with Mr. Forepaugh next season."

"Then you will give up being a beauty on a high backed cart, and breaking hearts by the bushel as you travel through the land?"

"Yes," replied Miss Montague, with a sigh. "I only took the position for the excitement. I liked it very much, but then you know the legitimate drama is my forte, and I don't marry somebody with plenty of money. I'll carry out my determination in the fall of 1882."

Then the beauty said good-bye, and the reporter with a decided feeling of emptiness about his heart, said farewell, and made his way into the prosaic street again.

AMONG LOOSE LIONS.

A splendid exhibition of nerve by a Dealer in Wild Beasts.

Mr. George Sanger, having engaged with Mr. Paul Clevins, the proprietor of the Porte St. Martin theater, Paris, to supply eight lions, two dromedaries and two elephants, to appear in "Biche aux Bois," the lions were brought to the theater. At 9 the next morning the man in charge of the elephants, with an expression of terror in his countenance, said in a whisper to Mr. Sanger, "the lions are out." "Well," said Mr. Sanger, "why don't you catch them? Where's the keeper, Macdonald?" "Don't know, sir," Mr. Sanger, taking an oil lamp, with a wretched, smoked globe, went to the stage, and, after walking about for a time, was heard to say, "Oh, there you are, are you, and looking over a trap in the stage, he saw the big lion, Tichborne, and presently the other two came prowling by. "All right; I will soon have them," said Mr. Sanger. At this the big lion, as though he understood what was said, threw up his head and opened his ponderous jaws, showing his great tusks. Mr. Sanger took a heavy whip used by the elephant keeper, and with this in one hand and the lamp in another, dashed into the cellar. The lions instantly dashed off. Presently he was heard to say, "It's all right; I have got one of them." Mr. Sanger came upon the stage and said the other two were concealed among the broken timber and waste at the bottom of the cellar, and that he would have them directly. Several tried to catch him, but he made no further attempt. "What am I to do?" he answered; "I have engaged to bring eight lions here to appear in the 'Biche aux Bois,' and not to roam about the theater." At this moment something was heard to fall. Mr. Sanger, leaving without saying a word, went into the cellar again, and after searching in vain for the lions for some time, discovered that they had got into the bottom cellar. They had fallen a depth of twenty-five feet. "All right, I have got them; come on, come on," cried Sanger. Thinking the lions were secure, some friends descended, but they were only caught up in a corner. "Bring up those shutters, be quick!" was next heard, and seeing such bravery shown by Mr. Sanger, they plucked up courage, carried several shutters, and hemmed them in. Then the cage from which they had so recently broken being lowered, the capture was easily effected. The hunt was carried on in the most calm and collected manner possible, and proved beyond all doubt that there was not the slightest fear on the part of Mr. George Sanger, the modern lion-hunter.

AT THE ALTAR.

Celebration of the Webb-Vanderbilt Nuptials--A Fashionable Event in Society Circles in New York.

New York, December 20.--Miss Lulu Osgood Vanderbilt, youngest daughter of William H. Vanderbilt, was married at half-past three o'clock this afternoon, at St. Bartholomew's church, to Dr. William Stewart Webb, son of General James Watson Webb. Rev. Dr. S. S. Cook, rector of St. Bartholomew's, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Dr. Robert S. Rowland, rector of the church of the Heavenly Rest. Bishop Potter pronounced the benediction. At the hour appointed for the ceremony the bridal procession passed up through the center aisle in the following order: Eight ushers--Miss Lespinard Stuart, Sargent Gram, Philip S. Miller, Louis Webb, Frank Webb, George Vanderbilt (brother of the bride), Edward H. Wales and George De-Forrest Grant; six bridesmaids: Misses Helen and Bessie Webb (sisters of the bridegroom), Katie Curtin, Mary Carahan, Nellie McCoub, of Philadelphia, Lulu Church, of Philadelphia; four flower girls: Misses Addie and Emily Sloan, Alice Shephard and Gertrude Vanderbilt (cousins of the bride); the bride, leaning on her father's arm; the groom and the best man, Walter Webb, met the bride at the chancel, and the ceremony then took place.

The bride's dress, one of Worth's masterpieces, was composed of silver satin, with a rich train. It was entirely covered with magnificent point lace, row after row forming flounces across the front. The veil, which reached fully to the end of the train, was of point lace, and was secured by diamond clasps. The dresses of the bridesmaids were composed of moire antique, the front of each being laid in cut crystal fringe. They were trimmed with Rhine jewelry, drawn back and fastened with astrich tips. Each dress was cut in deep squares at the neck, and trimmed with white silk and cut crystal. The little girls were dressed in pale shell silk, and wore plush hats, with long veils, and carried Leghorn hats filled with roses, with bunches of marguerites at the side of the baskets. They also wore diamond pany-pins, which were gifts from the bridegroom.

The music was of a very select and varied description. Mr. Croighton Webb, a brother of the bridegroom, being the organist. The floral decorations of the church surpassed in splendor and lavish expenditures all previous displays of the kind in this city. Nearly the whole of the vacant space in front of the church pews had the appearance of a forest of rare tropical plants and vines. Over two thousand invitations had been sent out for the ceremony in the church. At half-past four o'clock, the wedding ceremony being over, the most intimate friends of the bride and bridegroom and of the Vanderbilt and Webb families attended a reception at the mansion of Mr. W. H. Vanderbilt, No. 450 Fifth avenue. The number of invitation which were sent out for this entertainment was three hundred, and Delmonico served a collation. The house was magnificently adorned for the occasion. A line of palms was placed on each side of the hall, interspersed with mistletoe and red berries, and behind which were an orchestra played at intervals, a large table covered with maiden-hair fern supported a miniature rose garden on the left side of the hall. Vases filled with Mornet roses, ivy and Mocha No. 1 roses were also placed in the hall. An arch of smilax, with pedestals of ferns, was placed at the head of the parlor, and underneath it stood the newly-wedded pair receiving the congratulations of their dependents. From the center of the arch depended a marriage bell of roses, and a vase of ferns was placed on the top of the arch. The windows were curtained with smilax, the tassels and loops being of roses, and a bank of ferns filled each window-sill. Smilax festooned the large chandeliers. Everywhere throughout the house was the same lavish display of decoration. The newly married couple set out immediately after the reception upon their bridal tour.

THE DEMAND FOR CANARIES.

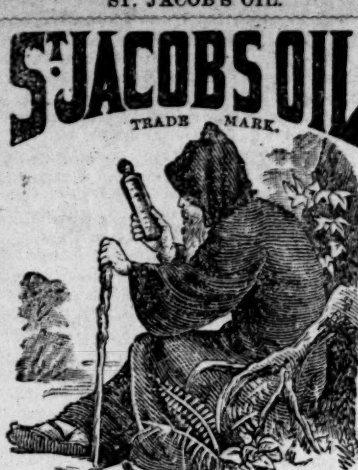

Over One Hundred Thousand of the Little Warblers Annually Sold in This Country.

New York World.

The canary bird season is at present at its height. The "crop" of birds raised in the Hartz mountains is an abundant one this year, and it is expected that the peasants will raise fewer birds next year, in order to put up the price. This week ordinary birds are selling here at $18 a dozen. A little later the price will be raised to $24 and perhaps higher as the season advances and the expenses of keeping the birds accumulates. Mr. Reiche, who has catered to the public taste for floggers, elephants and the like, and who has ten thousand canaries in his shop now claims the credit of having educated the people to an appreciation of the canary bird. When he began business, in 1847, only 1,500 or 1,800 birds could be sold a year. Now his annual sales reach 50,000, and other dealers sell 25,000 more. It is estimated that at least one person in fifty throughout the country has a canary bird. Mr. Reiche also says that when he came here flowers were rarely seen in houses, while now they are frequently found, and he thinks that this love of flowers has been inculcated to some extent by the taste for canary birds, for which he claims credit. About 5 per cent of the birds shipped from Germany are expected to prove a loss. There is hardly any demand for the finer birds, which in Europe sell for $25 cash or thereabouts.

THE SUNSHINE

SPREADING OVER YOUR GOODLY LAND.

The Dawn of an Era of Happiness and Prosperity—Cheerful Anticipations of Bright Days in Store For Us—Pleasant Disposition of Americans to Make the Most of Life.

"Gail" in Cincinnati Enquirer.
New York, December 16.—Speaking to-day to a wealthy and prominent advertising agent, who talks with business men and newspapers throughout the country, he said: "I am of the opinion that the present period of prosperity will last a great many years. It may last as long as that of British prosperity between the beginning of the French revolution and the collapse of 1825—more than one-third of a century. At that time England prospered so long because she occupied the first position in the world for trade and colonization. While she conducted great wars, she made them more tenders to her trading enterprise and manufactures. Those wars stood in the light of protective duties to her industries and commerce. Now, you can not compare her position and her population in that period with ours at present. We have one of the greatest populations ever assembled in one nation of intelligent men in nearly every department. Individuality and association work together in this country as they have never done anywhere."

"There is very little waste in the United States, when you come to look at it. What are we spending our money at present for? Not to sustain a court and pay the queen a salary of $5,000,000 a year. Not to protect hares and pheasants on enormous private estates where the farmers lift their heads no higher from generation to generation. Not to maintain conquered colonies with huge standing armies. We are spending our money to increase our facilities of communication and transportation, to disperse through the country rich and self-sustaining cities; to bridge our streams, discover precious mines, herd enormous cattle, and subdue this continent as the British race subdued the seas with their ships. Though we are not doing a great foreign trade of ourselves, it would be foolish for us to do it, considering the superior rewards we get in developing our country. The English spend enormous sums of money to bring up Australia, Polynesia, India and very distant places, where there was an enormous loss of material, men and cash before any thing much resulted."

"The proportion of loss in the United States is relatively very small. This country has hardly been struck anywhere where it does not yield reasonably, and often remarkably. There is a piece of country in Texas, called the stacked plains, which, when we were boys, twenty years ago, was described on the maps as an absolutely irremediable desert. Now the railroad is running over it, and it is found that about forty feet below the surface lie vast reservoirs of beautiful water. I contend that the Americans are the most economical people in the world, considering how much of their income they reinvest for development. Our business men do not pretend to keep English estates, and have one or two town houses, a yacht or two, a pack of hounds, an unreasonable stable of horses, one place in Ireland and one in Scotland, and another park in England. The average American has one city home, and perhaps a little cottage in some cool spot of the country, and he takes two months perhaps, every three or four years, to run over to Europe, where he buys such things as improve his taste and benefit his children. So I think that we save a great deal of money by this simplicity of our society."

Said I to this gentleman: "Do you apprehend no panic when we have built too much railroad, and these stocks and bonds fail to pay interest? Will they not be returned to us in payment for our exports?"
"Well," said he, "they cannot pay for what we export with such things except at the price we choose to receive them. The masses of our people have not subscribed to these railroad securities. They have been taken up by rich men, who already had large accumulations, and took the chances. If the roads stop paying dividends, which they cannot do, the effects of a hurricane. The Scythia had three days of exceedingly dangerous weather on the trip that took Mr. Gould back to his beloved Florence."

The Portland Press says that it understands that Tiffany & Co. are in negotiation with the family of the late sculptor, Thaxter, for the right to reproduce all his works. "Sunburst," "Fountain," and "reproach" are owned by them, and they want "Hesperus" and "Love's Young Dream." The last work, not yet in the marble when young Thaxter died in Italy.

Mr. Ford Madox Brown, the famous English painter, has for some time been engaged upon the frescoes of the town hall of Manchester. The subjects of three of these which are now completed are drawn from local history and represent: 1. Baptism at York of King Edwin; 2. Baptism at York of the Danes; 3. The Landing of the Danes in Manchester.

Referring to a certain western newspaper, the same authority said: "I think it is a great mistake for a newspaper owner to allow another man to farm out his columns for advertisements instead of having a regular rate the same to all. The late Colonel Forney sacrificed his once powerful newspaper by leaving the country and letting a number of jockeys make what they could out of his advertising columns paying him a lump sum per annum."

"What do you think of newspapers dispensing with advertisements altogether?"
"It will never be done. A newspaper entirely filled with reading matter would be a very heavy thing. Advertisements minister to the curiosity, and portray the times even better in some respects than reading matter." He referred to a cheap newspaper in one of the large cities as follows: "There is a paper which probably would not circulate ten thousand copies outside of the city, or in any other city, if published, just as that is. But it seems to have grown up in that place, which is a rather slow, sedate town, and to be indigenous to it. It has entwined itself with the daily life there, and become vastly profitable. Now what does it amount to? except its advertisements? Some old woman advertises a mop-handle, and in that place are several thousands just such women as herself, who have a mop-handle to sell or buy, and who read it. The proprietor is a kind of Barnum, who exerts several little dodges to increase the mystery of himself. He has eighty districts in that city, each with its carrier-general. If any one person stops taking the paper, the doorbell is rung within a day or two to ask why it has stopped, and to re-establish personal relations between the office and the house. In every one of those districts are two or three persons who have been instantly, the big office, and had a chrono, a stick of cough-candy, a photograph of the owner, or some other Barnum dodge. Consequently, they contrive to make the paper seem to be a sort of vast and beautiful mystery. Now open the paper, and there is nothing in it but the representation of the city, conveyed by that mass of advertising."

I asked this gentleman about the greatest advertisement in that country a few years ago. "Well," said he, "he came up here some time past to borrow ten cents, and looked on the verge of delirium tremens. I told him he would fall dead in the street if he took a drink, and refused him the ten cents. Well," said he, "I will take it and buy a cigar." Said I: "Here is a cigar better than you can buy for ten cents." He asked me if he could borrow ten cents from the proprietor of the daily newspaper close by me. I told him no humane man would let him have ten cents for drink. Then he went on with a certain amount of egotism. That man made a fortune by advertising, but, unfortunately, he had not the common sense and decent restraint to know what to do with so much money as he made. He abused himself with his money in every way. Advertising made him too rich for his character."

WATTERSON ON GUTEAU.

A Graphic Picture from a Nervous Hand.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—Accident, rather than curiosity, drew me toward Judge Cox's court room, where I spent this forenoon. The effect upon my mind amounted to a complete reversion of opinion and feeling; I had imagined the trial a farce. It is a tragedy. I had dismissed Guteau from consideration as a muddled, muddled "knavish and fool." He impressed me to-day as a man of acute understanding, and though a blundering, a truculent wit. I sat close to him, could see every glance of his eye, every phase of his expression, the slightest detail of poise and gesture.

The man is an excellent actor. He has a capital stage grimace and laughter. I declare there were times when he actually captivated me by his well-timed interpositions and effective play-acting. I came away precisely as one who has witnessed a stirring act of an eccentric drama, wherein all the parts were well-played.

Guteau, to begin with, could not have played his part better. Of course he could not, because the mimic world and the real world cannot be made to harmonize; but as a mimic actor on a real stage he certainly cuts no mean figure, and will go down to history as absolutely sui generis, a weird and wizen-d apothecary of dead-beat-ism.

All descriptions of his personal appearance are at fault. He is simply brazenly and shabbily and scantly genteel. His voice, instead of being harsh and unnatural, is both trained and taking; not resonant like the voice of Voorhees; not cultivated to the pitch of Wendell Phillips, but a homely, a vulgar cross between the two, with a touch of Mulberry Sellers and a reminiscence of Rip Van Winkle. He is no more crazy than I am. He shot Garfield at the last desperate venture in a life of moral obliquity and personal discomfort.

All the other parts in this startling extravaganza are well impersonated. Judge Cox certainly presides with dignity, and, considering prison and court, I cannot see how he could have avoided this dull part. On the whole, I think Corkhill leads the prosecution exceedingly well, and has the case thoroughly in hand. He thinks he is sure of a verdict, and I agree with him. It is impossible for any body to see this exhibition and come away without being satisfied that, morally, legally, intellectually and sentimentally, Guteau deserves to be hanged and will meet no other fate.

ART NOTES.

The sultan of Turkey proposes to restore the temple of Jerusalem.

William Cooper, the painter of portraits of Luke R. Blackburn and L. W. Taylor, two governors of Kentucky, has given them to the Kentucky historical society at Frankfort.

Mr. William H. Beard defines the decorative art of the day, so called, as a "craze consisting of Japanese fans, cat-tails, sunflowers, etc., grouped in various ways, and fastened with a horseshoe upon a background of two sick colors cut bias."

It is told of the late sculptor, Gould, who died in Florence recently, that he had himself fastened to the deck of the Scythia, on which he was a passenger, in order to witness the effects of a hurricane. The Scythia had three days of exceedingly dangerous weather on the trip that took Mr. Gould back to his beloved Florence.

The Portland Press says that it understands that Tiffany & Co. are in negotiation with the family of the late sculptor, Thaxter, for the right to reproduce all his works. CURES RHEUMATISM. MILAN TENN., November 1, 1881.

S. S. S. has cured several bad cases of Rheumatism and I have a good sale for it. W. H. CALEY.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK., November 19, 1881.

We have had several cases of Rheumatism cured by the use of S. S. S. after having tried all other treatment here in vain. O. A. JOHNSTON.

MERCURIAL RHEUMATISM. TUMBLING SHOALS, S. C., September 2, 1881.

I cured a colored man of Syphilitic Rheumatism by the use of S. S. S. who had been confined to his bed with it for several months. I think without S. S. S. he would have died. I have prescribed it in several cases of skin disease with best results. W. B. SMITH, M.D.

SAVED FROM A HORRIBLE DEATH. QUINCY, ILLINOIS, November 1, 1881.

Two years ago I contracted the horrible disease, and up to May last had spent $500 for treatment by the best medical men without any benefit, on the contrary I grew worse. My mouth and throat becoming badly ulcerated, sores breaking out on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with Rheumatism, growing very dependent, and my best friends advised me that the leg hand of death was fast upon me. I was in a desperate condition in May last. I caught at S. S. S. procuring, and indeed I felt such to be the case. This was my condition in May last. I caught at S. S. S. like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a great change for the better. The sores began to discharge freely and the Rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed, my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted in the use of S. S. S. until I had taken twelve bottles and THERE IS NOT A SYMPTOM OF THE DISEASE REMAINING, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained 21 pounds in flesh and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many and in every instance with complete success. I believe that S. S. S. has saved me from a horrible death, and wish I could induce every sufferer to do as I have done—take S. S. S. and be cured. C. H. SMILEY.
